

The Evening Post.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

Thursday, October 9th, 1873.

We referred a few days ago to the invitation given by the democratic convention of the State of New York to the Liberal Republicans to join hands, and rally to the support of the democratic ticket.

The effect of the harmless buncombe has been as unexpected to the Democrats as it is amusing to the world. The corps, as it is called in the ballad of Villkins and his Dinah, burst the ceremonies of the grave, and answered at Elmira yesterday. In the language of Brutus, when Cassius wanted to borrow a few sestercies, the reply was, "can't see it."

The experiment of annual legislative assemblies has been tried in North Carolina. It was not attempted sufficiently long, to bring to a test its advantages, and compare them with our old system. During the ensuing winter the members will solemnly meet, and in obedience to the spirit of the recently adopted amendments, immediately adjourn without a day. No doubt but some few of that body will desire either to make some changes in the laws, or pocket much per diem, but the patriotic resolution of the majority will say to such, "Nay! The people have decided that they want less of us. Although we did wish to gerrymander the State a little for the advantage of Democratic candidates for Judgeships, yet our hands are tied by the ratification of our amendment."

Any other course would be, in such violent antagonism to the wishes of the people who voted on the amendments that the Legislature would be careful not to arouse it. Should a protracted session of the General Assembly be held this winter, an inquiry will be raised as to the authority of so doing. It is manifestly the wish of all who had interest enough in the subject to vote upon it, for the Legislature to convene but once during its existence; except, indeed, some extraordinary occasion should call it together. If the present body has any respect for the declared sentiment of the people, it will adjourn as soon as it assembles.

The crowning glory of England is her administration of justice, which, as it is done there, is, perhaps, the most perfect of human institutions. Although her peculiar system of jurisprudence may be tainted with as many errors as that of any other country, yet in the judicial interpretation of her laws she is ahead of the world.

Two cases in England and in the United States coming before the civil tribunals, have occupied much attention, and given rise to much discussion. The effort of the adventurer Orton to possess himself of the Tichenborne property in England, involved a long and expensive suit which was determined adversely to the claimant; and he now stands indicted for perjury. Witnesses in this case had to be brought from the antipodes, and the amount of evidence taken, documentary and oral, was enormous. The result was a verdict which satisfied most people that Orton was himself and no one else.

For the third time Edward S. Stokes is arraigned for the crime of murder. Although the homicide was committed under such circumstances that a speedy trial ought to have terminated the proceedings in his case, yet his hair has whitened in the confinement of a prison. For more than two years the purchased favor of the courts of law has withheld an offering to justice. It is said that more than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars have been used in the work of corruption alone, and now, when the crime is softened by distance, and the resentment of the living is dying, the criminal puts himself on his country for a trial.

A Des Moines country farmer recently bought a new-fangled harvesting machine, thinking he would make quite a saving in the matter of wages during the harvest. On the day following his purchase, he sent his eldest son out with the machine to experiment upon the wheat crop. In a few hours afterward the old gent moved upon the scene of conflict, and found his son upon the top of a telegraph pole, over forty rods of stone fence cut, bound, and stacked in the most approved manner, while in the distance the horses and infernal machine were seen making for a grove of timber.

What some country newspapers ought to do is to firmly turn their backs on Latin and keep their rollers clean.

EDITORIAL BUDGET.

Geo. Wilkes has applied for an order of arrest against John J. Chamberlain in an action brought by him to recover damages for injury done to his character.

John Bright has issued an address to his constituents at Rochdale proposing himself for re-election. He says the post he has accepted in her Majesty's government will put it in his power to serve the principles which he has constantly maintained better than if he remained only a member of Parliament. When unable longer to advance those principles or to perform the duties of the office he will retire.

Dispatch was received at the Ministry of War at Madrid, on Tuesday, from General Mariones, announcing a great victory by his troops over a large body of the Carlists near Agunza, in the province of Navarre. Many of the insurgents were killed, and a large number taken prisoners. General Mariones says the rout of the insurrectionists is complete, and his forces are in close pursuit of them.

The Assistant Attorney General for the Post Office Department has rendered an opinion sustaining the action of the Postmaster at Omaha, Neb., regarding the retention of the mail matter and refusal to pay money orders to one J. W. Suiterlin, the manager of a gift concert enterprise located in that city. The facts in the case are that the above named party went to Omaha, a comparative stranger, and started a grand gift concert enterprise, ostensibly to establish a "free library," using the names of several prominent citizens as directors of his concern to give it a color of respectability. The parties advertised as directors published cards denying any connection whatever with J. W. Suiterlin or his enterprise. In view of these facts the Postmaster at Omaha refused to deliver any mail matter or to pay any money orders to the said Suiterlin, who appealed the case to the Postmaster-General. The Assistant Attorney-General cites the act of Congress of June 8, 1872, which makes it a violation of law for any party to deposit in a post office any letter or circular of a so-called gift enterprise, lottery, etc., intended to deceive the public and obtain money under false pretences.
